little more than a week. This avoids the main source of difficulty which has been found, especially with the Italians, and all excitement when their pay is held back. They view the American, therefore, not as an enemy, but as a benefactor, and their ignorance of the language increases their helplessness.

The Italians who are brought here seem to be from the lower classes of the Italian peninsula. They are imported mainly by padrones in New York, who furnish the passage money and collect money monthly from them. The contractors obtain them from these labor-brokers. The Chinese themselves live on more frugally, and come here with no more deliberate purpose of taking money out of the country and spending it as little as they can while here. The contractors furnish the bread on which they live. Three barrels arrive daily at the Midland depot, Nevada, from Oswego, to supply the wants of those near that place. They gather about these barrels, when their feeding time comes, each man holding the ticket with his number, and calling out his number, like Irishmen, who provide for himself alone. Here as well as elsewhere they show animal-like indifference to each other's presence. This they keep up when they are at their work. They are very much attached to their rough boards, and about the sides are broad shelves, where three or four lie at night. They sleep on the floor, also, in every available corner. They do very little cooking, once in a while only a boiled potato, which they eat with their hands. They are fond of dandelions, often digging them up with their fingers and eating them raw. But when they get them boiled in the kitchen, they eat them with relish. Yet, strict vegetarians as they are, and as they have been in Italy all their lives, they are strong and tough, if not overintelligent workmen. Their diet mainly accounts for the fact they do not become ill. They are very much attached to their rough boards, and about the sides are broad shelves, where three or four lie at night. The census of Portugal shows an increase from 1861 of 12 per cent. This is from 3,003,000 to 4,100,000. This is a slow but healthy growth and confirms other signs of the increasing prosperity of the Iberian peninsula. It is not improbable that Spain and Portugal will catch up with Italy in development under peace and liberal administration.

The following table is made up by Consul General Weaver:

COUNTRY.	1861.	1871.	1881.
Spain	10,000,000	11,000,000	12,000,000
Portugal	3,000,000	3,500,000	4,100,000
Italy	25,000,000	28,000,000	31,000,000
France	35,000,000	38,000,000	41,000,000
Germany	40,000,000	45,000,000	48,000,000
Austria	45,000,000	48,000,000	51,000,000
Prussia	50,000,000	55,000,000	58,000,000
Great Britain	25,000,000	28,000,000	31,000,000
United States	3,000,000	3,500,000	4,100,000

In this table Saxony, Prussia, Bavaria and Wurtemberg are all given separately, though they are also included in the grand total of the German Empire. It will be noticed that France has the lowest rate of increase of all next to Hungary.

A striking feature of all these censuses is the growth of the cities. Even in Hungary, the capital city of Pesth has grown 32 per cent in 11 years, and is now as large as Boston, 350,000. There are several cities in Hungary with from 35,000 to 70,000 inhabitants, whose names are positively unknown to the western world, and but whose urban population has increased 15 per cent, so that the population of the Hungarian country districts has actually declined. In Bavaria also, a happy kingdom of the German Empire, with a population about as large as that of the State of New York, we find Munich growing 13 per cent in five years and now numbering 220,000 inhabitants, Nuremberg with nearly 100,000, and 18 smaller towns down to 12,000, all increasing at a similar rate, Bavaria as a whole has increased only 8 per cent in 10 years.

Nearly all these countries and cities from which we are reported show an excess of women. Austria has a million in excess of the men. Munich has 10,000 females in excess of the males, and of her 30,000 increase in population, in five years, two-thirds appear to be of the former sex. The census of Vienna is quite fully reported upon by Mr. Delaplanche, secretary of our legation there, but unfortunately he gives no comparison with previous years. Vienna has now a population of 705,000, women being about 40,000 in excess. It is thus 10,000 short of Philadelphia in 1880. Six-sevenths are Catholics; 11,000 cannot read and write, but this includes children under six years of age. Among the 30,000 women given, 10,000 are domestic servants, 7,500 female teachers, showing that the services of women as teachers are not unknown in Austria, though not so fully employed there as in this country. There are reported as "industrial" 1,000 males and 570 females. Can these be clerks or do the mothers of the city inspect back-wards and the school-house privileges and find the swill-garbage of their needs. This is evidently an idea worth thinking about. Among "domestic" workers are 22 women are reported, and there are other indications that Vienna is liberal toward the rising sex.

The Labor Problem.
The great influx of unskilled labor which has marked the immigration to this country this year and the present struggle for employment at wages hardly remunerative are leading to some remarkable occurrences. The Utica Herald describes a social study now progressing near that city from the presence of large numbers of workmen, embracing many of various tongues, and all working together. The Herald says:

The firms of Belden, Dennison & Co., and of A. C. Belden, of Syracuse, have 1,700 hands on their pay-roll in the counties of Onondaga, Madison, and Oneida. The pay varies from week to week, but it all seems to be their practice to set all able-bodied men who offer at work at some point along the line. In going along parts of the new route this week, a reporter was about ready to say that the day of the "free" cost had fully come, and that the men were building a Tower of Babel instead of a railroad. Perhaps there are not really many of these "free" hands, or, if they are, they are a tame handling pick and shovel along the west shore, but there are three or four gangs of Hungarians, some Danes, a band of forty Greeks, Irishmen, Germans, Americans and a large number of Italians. A lot of Hungarians reached Syracuse six weeks or more ago, and, not finding work at once, expended their money in living, and west shore contractors to save them from suffering gave them employment. Their names were entered by numbers on the books of the firms, each man being furnished with a ticket on which his number is printed. This he hangs about his neck. Many of the Hungarians are registered in this way. The contractors are paying $15 a day for laborers, all men along the line receiving the same for full time. They pay $30 a day for teams, and most of these are obtained from the west shore. Those who have been doing fine if more for their farm work than for their work on the railroad, and the hands in the employ of these contractors, though they are of many nationalities and of a low degree of intelligence, and principally because they have received their money promptly after it is earned. The time books of the bosses are sent to Syracuse every Thursday, and from the record they furnish, pay for each day. It is returned to him in an envelope by Tuesday for his work of the seven previous work-days. In this way, no matter how poor a man is when he begins to work for these firms, he is left without money, only for a
